

BA in Management and Finance

Management and Finance	Institution	Faculty of Management, University of Lodz
Duration 6 semesters (3 academic years) Language of instruction ECTS points 180 Management and Finance (M&F) is a bachelor's degree programme at the Faculty of Management, University of Łódź. It aims to educate professionals prepared to perform international companies' management, finance, and accounting tasks. Completing M&F will enable you to gain a solid knowledge of finance and accounting and the managerial skills necessary to analyze a company's financial situation and economic and business trends and make effective business decisions. By studying M&F, you will develop soft skills such as communication, creativity, a critical approach to solving business problems and work ethic. As the graduates, you will effectively fulfil the role of a business partner in a company, actively seeking and creating its value. Programme description In the first year of M&F, you will learn and understand the functioning of an organization on the market. The following years of study are characterized by a deepening of business issues, emphasizing finance, financial and managerial accounting, and performance measurement, considering sustainable development problems. The third-year involves mandatory internships in a company and the opportunity to participate in numerous elective courses, most often taught by international academic staff. Highly qualified academics teach M&F classes with academic and professional experience. Additionally, we invite specialists from business practice (e.g., professionals from Big 4 companies) and lecturers from foreign universities (e.g., Germany). M&F is accredited by The Chartered Institute of Management Accountants		Management and Finance
